Judge Black, of Pennsylvania, who was Mr. Buchanan's Attorney General until a lengthy card professing to indicate Mr.

Stanton's political views at that time and to recite some reminisences of the closing

Whatever Mr. Black's assertions may be worth his statements are interesting. We copy the portion of the country of the salvation of the core of the care interesting.

on the 20th of November I answered the President's question concerning his legal powers and duties, bolding that the ordinances of secession were mere nullities; that the seceding States were and would be as much in the Union as every that the federal Exceptive was bound there as well as elsewhere to execute the laws, to hold the public property and to collect the revenue; that if the means and machinery furnished by law for these purposes were inadequate he could not adopt others and usurp powers which had not been delegated; that neither the executive nor legislative departments had authority under the constitution to make war upon a State; that the military power might be used, if necessary, in adding the judicial authorities to execute the laws in collecting the revenues, in defending or retaking the public property, but not in acts of indiscriminate hestility against all the people in the State. This is the "opinion" which has since been so often, so much and so well abused, denounced and vilified. Mr. Stanton did not stullify himstified descripts, the thin polytons and Mr. Stanton did not stultify him-entirely on those fundamental doctrines of constitutional law to which we were seen as the throne of France. We took him for what he professed to be—a true friend of the Union; a devote believer in the constitution; a faithful man, who would not violate his oath of office by wilful disobedience to the laws. I am still convinced that he did not deceive us. If he abandoned those principles in 1863 the change, however sudden and unaccountable, is not satisfactory evidence that he was an impostor and a hypocrite in 1890.

He did not find Mr. Holt and General Dix contending alone (or contending at all) against the President and the rest of the Administration. Mr. Holt on the 3d of March, 1801, appended to his letter of resignation a strong expression of his gratifulde for the "lirin and generous support" which Mr. Buchanan had constantly extended to him, and pays a warm tribute to the "enlightened statesum ashlp and unsullied patriotism" of the outgoing President. General Dix was not there at all when Mr. Stanton came in. He was appointed a month afterwards, when there was no the most appointed a month afterwards, when there was no the most and brack's second, were adopted with Cameron, and therefore did not vote. TERIT'S COURSE IN GEORGIA.—There is some feelings among Republicans in Congress about the course General Terry is pursuing in Georgia. Nobody knows by what authority he is making a millitary investigation into the right of members of the Legislature to hold their seats, and some of the soundest Republican Scinators say he has no right under any law to do this thing. It is given out in Administration circles that he intends to do no more than to submit to the Gov-nacious; the answer to South Carolina was essentially changed, and it was agreed that Fort Sumter should have men and pro-

He had been deal to be a support of the coarseness which some of his later friends have attributed to him. He Inter friends have attributed to him. He never spoke without the greatest respect for his colleagues and the profoundest deference to the President. He said no word to the President about resigning. He told me that he would resign, if I did; but when certain concessions were made to my wishes he expressed himself perfectly satisfied. He did not furnish one atom of the influence which brought the President round on the answer to South Carolina. Nor did he ever propose to carry any measure of his own, directly or indirectly, relating to the secession troubles. He uni-

"It would be a wrong to the memory of Mr. Stanton not to add that, so far as I know, he never gave countenance or encouragement to those fabulous stories of his behavior.

WASHINGTON NEWS AND GOSSIP.

RUSHVILLE, RUSH CO., IND., Jan. 17.
To the Editor of the Cincinnati Gazette:
We see, in the Semi-Weekly of the 11th, an account of one George W. Crawford, Scioto county, Ohlo, fifteen years old, stands 6 feet 1 inch high, measuring around the shoulders 3 feet 11 inches, 41 inches around the chest, 42 inches around the hips, weighs 188 pounds and wears No. 10 boots, who is willing to test his strength with any boy of the same age in America. Now, Mr. Editor, a Hoosier can beat the Buckeye. We have a boy, here in Rush county, Indiana, whose name is Benjamin F. Kiplinger, fifteen years old the 20th of hast September. He stands 6 feet high, measures around the shoulders 57 inches, 46 inches around the clest, 46 inches around the clest, 46 inches around the lips, weighs 235 pounds, RUSHVILLE, RUSH Co., IND., Jan. 17. son which has since been so often, so much and so well abused, denounced and vilified. Mr. Stanton did not stultify himself by denying the plain obvious and simple truits which it expressed. The paper was shown him before it went to the President, and after a slight alteration suggested by himself, he not only approved but appleaded it enthusiastically.

It disappointed the President. He had lastily taken it for granted that Congress might make secession a cause for war; and in the draft of his message already prepared he had submitted the question of war or peace to their decision. But the advice of the Law Department, supported by a powerful argument from General Cass, convinced him of his error, and that part of his message was rewritten. The substance of the message so modified received Mr. Stanton's hearty endorsoment in everything that regarded secession and the treatment it ought to receive.

Soon after this General Cass rottred. I was requested to take the State Department and Mr. Stanton's hearty endorsoment in everything that regarded secession and the treatment it ought to receive.

Soon after this General Cass rottred. I was unwilling to leave the care of certain causes pending in the Supreme Court to any hands but his. This appointment alone, without any other proof, ought to satisfy any reasoning mind that all I have said about Mr. Stanton's sentiments must be true. No man in his sober senses can believe that I would have made the appointment five had not both known with perfect-certainty that he agreed with us entirely on those fundamental doctrines of constitutional law to which we were committed. The faintest suspicion of the contrary would have put the Attorney General's office as far beyond his reach as the constitutional law to which we were committed. The faintest suspicion of the constitutional law to which we were committed. The faintest suspicion of the constitutional law to which we were committed. The faintest suspicion of the constitutional law to which we were committed. The faintest WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21. I would suggest the Sinte line as the place—College Corner—some time during autumn.

roll call there was every manifestation of absorbed interest. The vote stood yeas: 31; nays 28; showing that the conditionists had a sure though small majority. All the other amendments, viz: Wisson's Morton's and Drako's socond, were adopted by the same vote. The absent Senators were Brownlow, Cameron, Cattell, Pool and Sprague, while McCreery was paired with Cumeron, and therefore did not vote. The Senators who stood by the Bingham bill without conditions were Carponter, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Fenton, Ferry, Morrill, of Maine, Nye, Ross, Sawyer, Scott, Sherman, Stewart, Tipton, Trumbull, Warner, Willey and Williams. The amended bill was passed by 48 to 10, the Democrats alone voting in the negative, and Messrs. Sumner and Thayer refusing to vote at all. The action of the Democrats was based on Mr. Thurman's briefly expressed opinion that the amendment of the afternoon clearly made the bill unconstitutional. Mr. Summer offered no reason for refusing to vote. The bill as it now stands is a wavetelon lice. Most persons look upon the vote of yesterday on printing Wells's report as in some degree a test of the strength on the question of protective duties. If this view is instition, it is clear enough already, that the committee's tariff bill will be torn all to pleese as soon as the House gets at it. Three or four members of the committee at least expect this result, and that the committee will be overruled on very many points, and in favor of lower duties, is regarded as certain by all careful observers.
